- Daniela Rus, Director
MIT AI Laboratory

Through a deep immersion into the foundational principles, frameworks, platforms and insurance applications of artificial intelligence, participants earn the Certified AI Insurance Practitioner (CAIP) designation

Overview: Every insurance professional is aware that Artificial Intelligence holds the potential of transforming how insurance companies come to market, select risks, construct customer solutions, make decisions, work and operate. No technology has so shaped today’s business narrative as the almost daily advancements in the extraordinary sophistication of AI. But the real challenge is to rise above the hype. To set aside what we are being told or sold and strive to gain actionable knowledge. The knowledge that harnesses the power of AI to enable ever higher levels of organizational and individual performance. The knowledge to rapidly translate the potential of AI into insurance applications that deliver immediate and enduring value.

The CAIP Designation Workshop delivers a robust learning experience that equips participants with the insights required to translate the potential of AI into real-world insurance applications. The content rich curriculum replaces theory with immediately actionable knowledge. The foundational frameworks of Machine Learning are combined with the progressive advancements of increasingly autonomous Generative and Agentic AI Models. These robust learnings come alive through actual examples and case studies drawn from the very best insurance company developed AI applications. This knowledge is then expanded through “how-to” build and apply insurance AI success stories covering marketing, underwriting, operations and claims.

“The businesses and organizations that succeed with AI will be those that rise above the hype and continually strive in making a solid match between their business problems and the ever-expanding capabilities of AI”

Tom Davenport, Coauthor Agentic AI
